FRENCH SENTENCE

Berlin, Dec. 28.—France is appar ently prepared to stay in the Rhineland and Ruhr indefinitely. That is indicated by the sentences passed by the French courtmartial at Duesseldorf on German officials and police who opposed the separatists in trying to detach the Rhineland from Germany. Altogether, 16 were sentenced to prison terms ranging up to 10 years in exile, which is explainable only on the theory that the French expect to be still there after that time. The men were condemned on their mother's insene frenzy had the ground that they participated in converted the smallest child into an a gun battle with the separatists at oil soaked torch and imprisoned the the flaming room. The prisoner confessed, police say, that he is the slayer of Estelle Phillips, saleswoman in a Broadway department store, who was strangled in her room 10 weeks ago. He also confessed, according to the police, to the murderous attack on Mary Mitchell, a Philadelphia nurse, who was attacked on the grounds of the tuberculosis hospital, Chestnut Hill, early this month. The nurse is in a dangerous condition and is not expected to live.

While Benner was being grilled the authorities were 'in communication with officials of other cities, who had reported that a man answering the prisoner's description had mistreated and choked to death five other Benner occupied a room adjacent

DENBY SEES NEED FOR NEW SHIPS IN THE AMERICAN NAVY

Washington, Dec. 28 .- The navy department will send to congress next week a request for authorization and appropriation of funds to begin construction of eight fast 10,000-ton cruisers and three submarines of the cruiser or fleet type. It was reported at the capitol that President Coolidge will add his approval of the recommendation. The construction of these vessels constitutes the chief feature of the building program outlined by Secretary Denby in his annual report to the president and congress as being absolutely essential if the United States is to have any hope of attaining its rightful position under the 5-5-3 ratio of the naval limitation treaty.

Regarding cruisers, Secretary Denby said: "The navy of the United States is so ill balanced and so deficient in cruiser strength that it would be put at a serious disadvantage in major operations of any kind."

As to submarines, he says: "If present foreign programs are completed without any additions the United States would have to build 50,000 tons of submarines in order to attain the treaty ratio."

Pacifist and "little navy" members of the house and senate are expected to oppose the department's recomnendations, but a vigorous fight will be made by those senators and representatives who believe the naval treaty involves an obligation to maintain the strength allowed this counChicago, Dec. 28 .- A farewell letter

"See Butler!"

Who is this man Butler? up in that section of New England ing session. that is overrun with great industries, cotton mills, paper mills. manufactories of all sorts, and his principal job right now is to see that Calvin Coolidge obtains a new lease on his present residence, dating from March 4, 1925. He has quietly and with no toothorns stepped into sition that is popularly known around the national capital as "close to the throne." He will manage Calvin Coolidge's campaign for the nomination at Cleveland next June. and if successful in that endeavor he in all probability will direct the federal authorities in Republican campaign for Coolidge's election in the following November. The successful candidate for the nomination usually picks the camtle doubt that if Carvin Coolidge is klan nominated his campaign boss will be William M. Butler, of New Bedford. Mass

William M. Butler is known as one of those Alger-like "poor boys" who occasionally go far in this modern game of business and litics. He was born in Massachusetts about sixty years ago. As a youth he worked in a clerical capacity in one of the numerous mills about New Bedford. Being ambitious he studied law, and in 1893, about the time Calvin Coolidge was graduating from Amherst College, he decided to run for the legislature. He was elected, and then and there began his political education.

Several years passed. There was famous legislative investigation involving a gas company in Massachusetts and William M. Butler took a prominent part therein as a member of the House

Several more years passed and found him in the Massachusetts State Senate, and subsequently lie rose to the presidency of that hody at a time when the late Murray Crane was sifting in the Governor's mansion. He became a pupil and a protege of what was popularly known n Massachusetts as the "Crane School of Applied Politics."

But the legislative halls didn't hold him. He retired after a few years and engaged in the practice of law in Boston, building up a lucrative practice and always keeping his hand in Bay State politics, a quite hand, but nevertheless a hand

More years passed and found Wil-Butler investing his earning and his borrowings in the textile mills of New Bedford. His investments prospered and subsequently he turned from the law to manufacturing almost entirely. Today there are the Butler Mills to testify to his shrewdness and business sagacity. He is popularly supposed to be worth a number of millions.

Always he kept his contract with Republican politics in Massachusetts. He never was a 'leader," and at the same time he never was "out of the picture." His friendship with that masterly Bay State political leader, Murray Crane, continued until the latter's death-as did that of Calvin Coolidge.

Thus when Calvin Coolidge was suddenly pitch-forked from the comparative oblivion of the Vice-Prestlency into the glaring spotlight of the Presidency and felt the need of political counsel it was but natural perhaps that he should turn to his old friend and fellow pupil of the Crane School, William M. Butler.

Mr. Butler came to Washington soon after Calvin Coolidge came to the big residence on Pennsylvania avenue. He has remained here pretty constantly ever since. comes and he goes in the White ing quarters are in a downtown hotel not far from the Executive Offices. He is a medium-sized man with smooth, unruffled, snowwhite hair and a pair of shoulders that some football players would envy. By some standards he would almost justify the word "handsome." His nose is prominent, his jaw aggressive, and his mouth for the most time is kept tightly closed. He fairly radiates efficiency and business.

His job right now is to see that Calvin Coolidge is nominated at the Cleveland convention next June, and after that to see he is elected. To the first end Mr. Butler will open general headquarters in Chicago the last of December, and thereafter it is probable that Middle West and Far West will see a great deal of him He isn't as widely known in those sections at present as he will be-say next June.

Mr. Butler has his own political brick, woven wire, fence, common face ambitions, according to his intibrick, hollow building tile, metal, mates, and they are not directed toward the Cabinet nor toward an Ambassadorship, as is the case with In four other important industries, many political directors. Under the sale agreement reached Thursday, as announced by attorneys, J. W. Gibney will pay Harry A. Sparks, as trustee, $62,000 for 500 shares of stock in the company. The purchaser will pay for the stock at once and assumed immediate possession of all the stock and property involved. He was allowed 90 days in which to release the Hutchison estate and Harry A. The sale marks an important turn in the history of one of Xenia's oldest business houses. The firm of Hutchison and Gibney came into being in 1877, being founded by W. Clark Hutchison and John Gibney. At the death of Mr. Gibney, his interest succeeded to his son, Walker Gibney, who continued the partnership with Mr. Hutchison until two years ago, when the company was incorporated for $100,000, with W. C. Hutchison as president, W. Gibney, vice president and Harry A. Sparks, secretary and treasurer. The store was burned out in 1915 and replaced by a modern department store structure, that is rated as a model of its kind for a city of this size

With the death of Mr. Hutchison, and the estalishment of the trusteeship of Harry A. Sparks, who assumed an active executive capacity with the company, differences of opinion resulted between the joint managers, which came to a head with the filing of the petition for a receivership, December 15, by Mr. Sparks. An answer filed by attorneys for Mr. Gibney demied charges made by Mr. Sparks and made counter charges.

Simultaneously, Mrs. Lulu Leeper was made a party defendant to the action and filed a similar answer, and in a motion filed in Probate Court sought the removal of Sparks as executor of the Hutchison

Lordon, Dec. 28.—Religious opinion in England, especially in nonconformist circles, is deeply stirred by the efforts to bring about a reunion of the Roman Catholic church and the Church of England, whose ties were severed by Henry VIII. The Archbishop of Canterbury selected the Christmas season for announcing that discussions are being held with Cardinal Mercier, because he felt that it would be least likely to provoke an acrimonious controversy at this pe-

Serious fundamental differences continue to exist between Rome and the English Protestants, which apparently can not be bridged except by unthinkable concessions by one church or the other. Therefore, most shades of religious thought believe that a reunion is impossible. For this reason the Church of England's move is not likely to lead to any nonconformist campaign against Rome. BRITAIN LIKELY TO RECOGNIZE SOVIET IN MONTH

Recognition of the Soviet Government is expected to follow the fall of the Unionist Government, despite the long series of unfavorable reports from the British Trade Mission in Moscow and information in the hands of the Home Office of Russia's efforts and plans to hoist the red flag over Buckingham Palace and the Houses of Parliament.

The only consideration which prevented such action heretofore has been respect for the American stand, with a view to maintaining the closest cooperation with the United States.

Of course, few statesmen or politicians, outside of certain radicals, have ever seriously considered there was the slightest possibility of the Union Jack being supplanted by another flag, least of all the red one of the Moscow Internationale. Moreover the British Chamber of Commerce, actuated by Russo-British trading companies, in which the passing Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, appears to be one of the interested parties, and a majority of the business and trading sentiment in Britain, favor any opportunity to obtain an anterior foothold in Russia for what it expects to be early and late trade.

DIPLOMATIC FUNCTIONS HAVE LOST COLOR

Frank Kellogg, newly appointed American Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, sailed for his London post fully convinced that he will not have to wear the court costume of silk knickers made famous by Colonel George Harvey. Ambassador Kellogg reached this gratifying conclusion from what he saw at the White House diplomatic reception. Like others in Washington, Mr. Kellogg realized that the diplomatic corps in Washington has become less colorful—that the gold lace, tinsel and flaming colors of pre-war days have been diminished at least one-third.

When the splendor of Count von Bernstorff is recalled and contrasted with the simple adornments of the present German Ambassador, Dr. Otto Weidell, the change that has come over the

Before the war the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador was the most resplendent of persons when he dressed up for a diplomatic function. Now the Austrian Charge d'Affaires in Washington wears regulation evening clothes minus even the shirt-breast ribbon that sometimes distinguishes the diplomatic representatives of the new republics of Northern Europe who disdain court costumes, and the military uniform for diplomats also is losing its

The trend toward simplicity also is noted in the costumes of esentatives of Latin-American countries. About fifteen years ago the Latin-American republics adopted a gold-braided evening coat for their diplomats, the braid differing somewhat for Ambassadors and Ministers and members of the embassy and legation staffs. FIND TRACES OF VEGETATION OF 50,000 YEARS AGO

Cincinnati, Dec. 28.-Traces of Arctic vegetation that grew 50, 000 years ago on vast areas in the United States, as melting glaciers left room for them, are found in a Montana park, 1,000 miles south of the Arctic circle, Botanical Pro-fessor W. G. Waterman of Northwestern University, told delegates to the convention of scientists here

"One of the most accessible area of these trees and flowers is near Logan Pass, in the Montaua Rockies," he said. "Scattered groups of evergreen trees, which correspond to the last tree of the north are found at the foot of the remaining glaciers. Grass meadows dotted with Arctic flowers, covered with brilliantly-colored lichens, are the equivalent of the dry tundra and rock tundra of the Arctic barren lands.

The Greatest Prayer in the World

Prayer is the highest act of man. In it he is nearest to his Creator and the farthest from his sometime brother-the brute. All women and most men pray-whether they admit it or not. Prayer is the soul's answer to the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" It came direct from Heaven, and did not unfold itself along with the convolutions of the brain.

Prayer is Hope with wings. It antedates all History. It will outlast Humanity itself. But prayer without faith is not prayer.

This is why the Lord's Prayer is the greatest prayer in the world. It is divine faith breathed into human words. All creeds, formulas, systems, philosophies, theologies-are within its miraculous compass. It is Religion itself. Like the dewdrop, it orbs have lived and died with it on their lips. One-half the world has known no other prayer for 2000 years.

This is why we call it the greatest prayer in the world.

This newspaper wants every one of its readers to have this Bible

GERMANY'S COURTS ARE CLOGGED WITH

Berlin, Dec. 28 .- The German supreme court at Leipsic is clogged and to death and attacked several others almost broken down under a calendar of 1,200 cases of German's awaiting trial for treason.

This was revealed through a decree The prisoner confessed, police say, by President Ebert issued as an "extraordinary emergency measure," making drastic reforms in the German judicial system to meet the situation bordering on national bankruptcy. The decree suspends all jury trials for three months in the interest of national economy. For the same reason it is decreed that no civil cases can be tried for the same period. Three extraordinary courts created some months ago to try a large number of radicals, or nationalists, charged with violating the law for the defense of the republic, have been ordered closed because the ministry of justice has no money to pay the cost of keeping them going. William M. Butler is known as one of those Alger-like "poor boys" go far in this who occasionally modern game of business and politics. He was born in Massachusetts about sixty years ago. As a youth he worked in a clerical capacity in one of the numerous mills about New Bedford. Being ambltious he studied law, and in 1893, about the time Calvin Coolidge was graduating from Amherst College, he decided to run for the legislature. He was elected, and then and there began his political education.

Several years passed. There was a famous legislative investigation involving a gas company in Massachusetts and William M. Butler took a prominent part therein as a member of the House.

Several more years passed and found him in the Massachusetts State Senate, and subsequently he rose to the presidency of that hody at a time when the late Murray Crane was sifting in the Governor's mansion. He became a pupil and a protege of what was popularly known in Massachusetts as the "Crane School of Applied Politics."

But the legislative halls didn't hold him. He retired after a few years and engaged in the practice of law in Boston, building up a lucrative practice and always keeping his hand in Bay State politics, a quite hand, but nevertheless a hand.

He is popularly supposed to be worth a number of millions.

Always he kept his contract with Republican politics in Massachusetts. He never was a 'leader," and at the same time he never was "out of the picture." His friendship with that masterly Bay State political leader, Murray Crane, continued until the latter's death-as did that of Calvin Coolidge.

Thus when Calvin Coolidge was suddenly pitch-forked from the comparative oblivion of the Vice-Presidency into the glaring spotlight of the Presidency and felt the need of political counsel it was but natural perhaps that he should turn to his old friend and fellow pupil of the Crane School, William M. London, Dec. 28.—Religious opinion in England, especially in nonconformist circles, is deeply stirred by the efforts to bring about a reunion of the Roman Catholic church and the Church of England, whose ties were severed by Henry VIII. The Archbishop of Canterbury selected the Christmas season for announcing that discussions are being held with Cardinal Mercier, because he felt that it would be least likely to provoke an acrimonious controversy at this period. Serious fundamental differences continue to exist between Rome and the English Protestants, which apparently can not be bridged except by unthinkable concessions by one church or the other. Therefore, most shades of religious thought believe that a reunion is impossible. For this reason the Church of England's move is not likely to lead to any nonconformist campaign against Rome. BRITAIN LIKELY TO RECOGNIZE SOVIET IN MONTH

Recognition of the Soviet Government is expected to follow the fall of the Unionist Government, despite the long series of unfavorable reports from the British Trade Mission in Moscow and information in the hands of the Home Office of Russia's efforts and plans to hoist the red flag over Buckingham Palace and the Houses of Parliament.

The only consideration which prevented such action hereto-fore has been respect for the American stand, with a view to maintaining the closest cooperation with the United States.

Of course, few statesmen or politicians, outside of certain radicals, have ever seriously considered there was the slightest possibility of the Union Jack being supplanted by another flag, least of all the red one of the Moscow Internationale. Moreover the British Chamber of Commerce, actuated by Russo-British trading companies, in which the passing Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, appears to be one of the interested parties, and a majority of the business and trading sentiment in Britain, favor any opportunity to obtain an anterior foothold in Russia for what it expects to be early and late trade.

DIPLOMATIC FUNCTIONS HAVE LOST COLOR

Frank Kellogg, newly appointed American Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, sailed for his London post fully convinced that he will not have to wear the court costume of silk knickers made famous by Colonel George Harvey. Ambassador Kellogg reached this gratifying conclusion from what he saw at the White House diplomatic reception. Like others in Washington, Mr. Kellogg realized that the diplomatic corps in Washington has become less colorful—that the gold lace, tinsel and flaming colors of pre-war days have been diminished at least one-third.

When the splendor of Count von Bernstorff is recalled and contrasted with the simple adornments of the present German Ambassador, Dr. Otto Weidell, the change that has come over the world is evident.

Before the war the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador was the most resplendent of persons when he dressed up for a diplomatic function. Now the Austrian Charge d'Affaires in Washington wears regulation evening clothes minus even the shirt-breast ribbon that sometimes distinguishes the diplomatic representatives of the new republics of Northern Europe who disdain court costumes, and the military uniform for diplomats also is losing its

The trend toward simplicity also is noted in the costumes of epresentatives of Latin-American countries. About fifteen years ago the Latin-American republics adopted a gold-braided evening coat for their diplomats, the braid differing somewhat for Ambassadors and Ministers and members of the embassy and legation staffs. Noting the drift of the times unanimous in adhering to gold embroidery, and each passing year sees them appearing in large numbers in unadorned evening dress.

The Greatest Prayer in the World

Prayer is the highest act of man. In it he is nearest to his Creator and the farthest from his sometime brother-the brute. All women and most men pray-whether they admit it or not. Prayer is the soul's answer to the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" It came direct from Heaven, and did not unfold itself along with the convolutions of the brain.

Prayer is Hope with wings. It antedates all History. It will outlast Humanity itself. But prayer without faith is not prayer.

This is why the Lord's Prayer is the greatest prayer in the world. It is divine faith breathed into human words. All creeds, formulas, systems, philosophies, theologies-are within its miraculous compass. It is Religion itself. Like the dewdrop, it orbs have lived and died with it on their lips. One-half the world has known no other prayer for 2000 years.

This is why we call it the greatest prayer in the world.

This newspaper wants every one of its readers to have this Bible
